A LAYERED APPROACH

If there is a general jewelry trend that applies to a variety of pieces and shows no signs of abating, it is layering. This style is as much in vogue on fashion runways as it is on Main Street. Perhaps the most visible manifestation of the layering technique involves wearing several link necklaces of different lengths and colors to create an overall effect that is both cohesive and eye-catching. The most interesting looks are created by layering chains of different precious metals and wholly different styles. The same sort of layering approach applies to bracelets as well. By outfitting one wrist with three, four, or more bangles of varying textures and materials, women can achieve a most artful effect.
